BIGFOOT!

SPRINGFIELD--Police here yesterday announced that they had captured and jailed Bigfoot, the elusive half-man, half-beast whose existence and evolutionary significance have been debated for decades by scientists and biologists.

NATIONAL INFORMER

MARRIED BIGFOOT!

SPRINGFIELD--With the eyes of the world rivoted on this sleepy town, the amazing capture of Bigfoot took a bizarre turn yesterday when lifelong Springfield resident Marge Simpson alleged she had been married to the monster for the past 12 years.

Springfield Police Chief Wiggum said in a prepared statement, "All evidence seems to corroborate Ms. Simpson's assertion that the beast we captured yesterday is in fact her husband, Homer Simpson."

The couple, Ms. Simpson alleged, were on a camping trip with their three children when the newly purchased vehicle planged 200

I found this in an old Almanac that Grandpa left in the bathroom.

I don't know what her name was, but I do know that Homer's once-wealthy half-brother, Herb, was the result of their short-lived affair.

Dear Shopper Editor,

I/we have had it up to here with your "newspaper" and it's reckless, anti-social policy of publishing story after story of babies being born, picture after picture of babies, advertisements of baby products, etc.

Where will it all end?

What about the rest of us who aren't babies?
Did it ever occur to you that we are the majority? If you ask me, you are only getting yourself in a real mess because the people will see all these baby stories and think "That's a good way to get my name in the paper," and that only leads to more babies!

So I'm now warning you: if you continue this policy, I will see to it that no child of mine ever lays an eye on your publication.

Sincerely,

Abraham Simpson

P.S. If you don't think I'm serious, you should see my newborn son. He shows no interest in what your paper, or anything else for that matter, has to say. More power to him if you ask me!

SHUCKS, He's the World's Best!

By Merl Merlow,
Shopper Business Editor

The Springfield Oyster Shucking Co. was all about Friday with the news that

Abe Simpson

Abraham Simpson, 29, had handshucked 7,587 oysters between 8:00
Monday morning and 5:00 Friday afternoon.

Simpson's achievement surpassed the previous one-week record of 7,428, set by the late "Lud" Denison in 1943.
"Not to take anything away from Lud or his beautiful widow," said an elated Abe Simpson when presented with a handsome scroll commemorating his feat, "but you have to remember that the Lud set the record in a six-day work week during the war, when the only thing this place turned out was beef in a tin.

"I'd like to see [Denison] try to break 5,000, let alone come close to my record, with big jumbos and those pretty little ones sailing down the conveyor belt.
Now that's shuckin'!"

Simpson said he planned to celebrate quietly at home with his 3-month-old son Homer.

"I'll probably just relax in front of the radio and try to get the smell off my hands," Simpson said.

Co., which has been closed for the past five weeks. When asked whether he would reinstate the "Lights Out for the Weekend" campaign, Burns said, "By the time I'm through, there'll be enough power around here to light up four or five Springfield!"

Dear Mr. Simpson:

I need to talk with you about ways to improve Homer's study habits. His constant efforts to draw attention to himself with noises imitating bodily functions and his off-color attempts at humor during class time have reached the point where I have no alternative but to warn you that drastic measures may be necessary.
 We've told him repeatedly that he's an underachiever, but Homer seems to think that's a compliment.

Today's Question: Do you think the state's new, proposed tax on beer is punitive?

Louise O'Dale, Home Maintenance Engineer:
"I think the first thing they should do is enact mandatory leash laws for all the cats in the state. Then they should start in on all the beerdrinkers."

BRILLIANT RESPONSE, HOMEBOY

Gomer Stimpson, Technical Supervisor, Nuclear Power Plant: "Is this some kind of practical joke? Well, I'm not gonna fall for it! What's my opinion? 'Ooga-booga-booga', that's what!"

Murphy's Tenor Evokes Youthful Anxiety

By Jiff Johnson, Shopper Music Critic

Bleeding Gums Murphy knows suffering so well you might mistake him for suffering's twin brother.

Last night at the Jazz Hole, however, Springfield's resident jazzman extraordinaire bent the reed of his tenor sax in the direction of second grader Lisa Simpson.

Murphy introduced the 7-year-old Miss Simpson's composition "The Manipulative Daddy Blues" to an appreciative Hole audience.

What makes this collaboration work is the juxtaposition of Murphy's well-worn (but never tired) voice of experience with the stark, honest perception of Simpson's youthful dilemma: the need to function in an oppressive home environment while simultaneously yearning for a liberated artistic space.

Murphy's quartet appearing indefinitely at Springfield's leading jazz venue, continues to break new ground in this most American of all music idioms.

I don't know much about this man's music, but I do wish he'd do something about that name!

Poem # 254

"Optimism" is the thing with fur
That curls upon the sofa
And dreams of Happy Little Elves
And never snores-- at all

And in the grimmest hour is there-- and annoying though my family be
They cannot bestir the Gentle Beast
That keeps my spirit free.

So long I've nurtured it
And thus I'll be repaid
For it shall, I know it shall Bring a pony unto me.

Dear Sir or Madam:

Correct me if I'm wrong, but I thought a person's 80th birthday was supposed to be a festive and dignified event.

I don't seem to hear you correcting me.

All right then, how do you suppose I felt when it was time to blow out the Quality (Hah! Now that's a hot one - if you get my meaning) Candle on my 80th birthday cake and I blew my damndest and nothing happened. Oh, all right, maybe the flame did lean over a few degrees, but not so's you'd notice.

Tell me this, Mr. or Ms. rocket scientist. If I made a wish, and the candle didn't go out, do I get a bonus wish? Well, if I do, here it is: I wish your whole ball of wax would go up in smoke!

Dear Editors:

I can guarantee you I have no intention of reading a single word of "And Then They Took Naps," but in my day if a book like that ever appeared on the shelves it would last about five minutes.

You probably think I am saying that all the copies would be bought by teasing masses of snout-thirsty lowlifes but if you DO think that is what I am saying, you are sadly mistaken my friends, because in my day a book like "And Then They Took Naps" would be scooped up and impounded by the proper authorities and would never see the light of day.

Before you go running like a bunch of muskrats in a monsoon for that old worn out First Amendment argument and trying to give me that old freedom of speech line, let me remind you that in my day we wouldn't think of putting Springfield women's or any other women's fantasies between the covers of a book or between other covers for that matter.

Things like this can only lead to blowing the cover of MEN'S fantasies or maybe their real-life misdeeds, and you wouldn't want that. I am reminded of my own little indiscretion with a woman shall remain nameless. This is the sort of thing nobody would do unless they were on their deathbed, which is exactly what I did myself in my shoes, and ask yourself, "What would I do?"

AND THEN THEY TOOK NAPS

By Helen Lovejoy
(Tattleton Press, $9.95 paper)

Tuesday's featured guest at the 46th regular monthly meeting of the Springfield Women's Literary Circle was newly published author Helen Lovejoy, wife of our own Rev. Lovejoy.

Ms. Lovejoy read from her best-selling book, "And Then They Took Naps", a novel based on the fantasy lives of certain Springfield housewives.

The session was lively and sometimes heated. An argument broke out when Selma Bouvier stood up and interrupted Ms. Lovejoy, saying, "Well, let's stop pussy-footing around, shall we? I mean, just who are the housewives you describe in 'Naps'?"

Ms. Bouvier's challenge touched off a raucous argument among the 23 members present, half of whom joined her call for full disclosure, chanting, "Let's hear the names!"

Chairperson Marjorie Simpson finally restored order by shouting above the noise, "Ladies! Please! I think we can agree there's a little of all of us in every one of these characters. Now, isn't it about time for the lovely cookies baked for us today by Gloria Blaze, uh, I mean Maude Flanders...?"

Next month's meeting will welcome the much-traveled botanist and photographer Lee Maltborn, who will discuss his highly acclaimed
